VETERANS HELPING VETERANS ON DV FARM NEED A TRACTOR

DV Farm Located in Gilsum, New Hampshire helps veterans struggling with the transition back into civilian life. DV Farm, Inc. a 501(c)(3) non-profit organization created to help homeless veterans with drug and or alcohol addiction by providing them a place to live and giving them a new purpose in life.

Veterans who have lived at the farm have praised the experience in helping them find themselves again. (Video Links Below)

DV Farm founded by a veteran who experienced his own personal challenges upon his return to civilian life. While living in Boston, Massachusetts, Michael Rivers Aka "DV6", found himself in trouble and homeless, living on the streets of Boston. DV6, with support of doctors and the veteran community, turned his challenge into a solution for others. The DV Farm, once a dream, looks towards expansion and a great future helping veterans.

This heavily wooded 50-acre farm is full of animals like chickens, ducks, goats, and alpacas. One major plan is to get a barn up this coming spring and have horses by the end of the summer in 2018. Veterans in the program get into a new positive daily routine to include, but not limited to, feeding, cleaning the animal's living space and, seeing to the overall well-being of each animal.

DV Farm is simply "Veterans Helping Veterans". The plan now is to expand, and make maximum use of this rocky New Hampshire farm. In order to accomplish expansion DV Farm is In need of a tractor. Additionally, to enable DV Farm to shuttle veterans to and from the VA Medical Center for care, they also desperately need a large passenger van.
